Day 3: Beijing

Today let's visit the authentic section of the famous wall, [Jinshanling Great Wall]. Jinshanling is connected to the Simatai Great Wall in the east and the Panlongshan Great Wall in the west. Jinshanling has probably the highest frequency of towers per kilometer of any place along the Ming Dynasty Great Wall. It also has one of the greatest varieties of architectural and defensive styles of both wall and towers. The cable car is the easiest way to reach the Great Wall. It brings you up to the top of a hill where you follow a short foot path to reach the Wall near the Lesser Jinshan tower. It is a largely unrestored as such, not crowded with hordes of other tourists. Climbing up this incredible man-made structure and surveying the spectacular surrounding countryside is an unforgettable experience.

Day 4: Beijing

Kids will love this day! We will go to the [Beijing Zoo] in the morning to see China's National Treasure-the cute Pandas! Beijing Zoo, situated to the west of Beijing Exhibition Center, was known for a short time after the founding of the People's Republic as the Western Suburbs Park (Xijiao Gongyuan). The grounds combine cultivated flower gardens with stretches of natural scenery, including dense groves of trees, stretches of grassland, a small stream, lotus pools and small hills dotted with pavilions and halls. And after lunch, the [Summer Palace] is waiting for you. It is a renowned imperial summer resort from the Ming and Qing Dynasty and is a great example of China's extraordinary workmanship and architecture. Being the largest and most well-preserved royal park in China, it greatly influences Chinese horticulture and landscape with its famous natural views and cultural interests, which also has long since been recognized as "The Museum of Royal Gardens".
